Patuxent Methodist Episcopal Church

3500 North Solomons Island Road

Huntingtown, Calvert County

1896

Private

Patuxent Methodist Church, built in 1896, is located at 3500 North Solomons Island Road to the south of Huntingtown and is an example of a late-19th-century rural vernacular church executed in the Gothic Revival style. The traditionally African-American congregation was formed in 1883 by the Chase, Mackall and Wall families. The church is said to be one of the most significant African-American Methodist churches in Calvert County. Documentary photographs reveal that the church as originally constructed consisted of a typical one-room sanctuary with a front-gable roof, a gabled apse to the west and the projecting steeple and entry vestibule. The one-story, one-room wood-frame hall plan adopted for the early church is typical for "public" buildings of the late 19th and early 20th centuries and was used for churches, parish/fellowship/grange halls, fraternal halls, and community halls during this period. The cemetery includes the interments of several significant African-America members of the local community, including Reverend Levi Chase. The cemetery also includes hand-carved gravestones dating to the 20th century.

The one-story church has an L-shaped footprint created by the original sanctuary constructed in 1896, and the circa 1995 addition which projects from the south elevation. The church is set on a solid, parged masonry foundation, is clad in aluminum siding and has a cross-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. It has projecting gables and eaves and a boxed aluminum cornice. Measuring three bays in width, the façade is dominated by a central, projecting, square bell tower set on a gabled entry vestibule. The tower features a scroll-sawn balustrade, wood post supports, a beaded-board ceiling, and a pyramidal roof with flared eaves. Double-leaf doors capped by a lancet-arched window mark the vestibule. Windows on the building are 9/9 vinyl-sash with unmolded vinyl surrounds. The large one-story addition to the south elevation of the original sanctuary features a gable-on-hip roof.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

SETTING. The church is set on high ground on the west side of North Solomons Island Road south of Huntingtown. The property consists of a sloping, grassy clearing scattered with mature trees and shrubs and a paved drive and parking area. The church is situated very close to and faces North Solomons Island Road. The cemetery slopes to the west. A non-historic shed is also associated with the property. A late-20th-century suburban, residential subdivision is located to the northwest of the property.

PRIMARY RESOURCE. The one-story church has an L-shaped footprint created by the original sanctuary constructed in 1896, and the circa 1995 addition, which projects from the south elevation. The church is set on a solid, parged masonry foundation, is clad in aluminum siding and has a cross-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. It has projecting gables and eaves and a boxed aluminum cornice. Measuring three bays in width, the façade is dominated by a central, projecting, square bell tower set on a gabled entry vestibule. The tower features a scroll-sawn balustrade, wood post supports, a beaded-board ceiling, and a pyramidal roof with flared eaves. Double-leaf doors capped by a lancet-arched window mark the vestibule. Windows on the building are 9/9 vinyl-sash with unmolded vinyl surrounds. A large one-story addition to the south elevation of the original sanctuary features a gable-on-hip roof. A centrally placed, inset entry vestibule with a segmental-arched opening marks the primary elevation of the addition. The gable peak features a triangular peak vent and an ornamental cross. The rear elevation features multiple one-story gabled additions.

SECONDARY RESOURCES. The cemetery surrounds the church on the northwest, west and south sides. It consists of approximately one hundred marked graves dating from 1883 to the present, although most graves are marked post-1940. Family names present in the cemetery in large numbers include Jones, Mackall, and Gray. There are a number of hard-carved stone markers primarily dating to the second half of the 20th century.

Built in 1896, Patuxent Methodist Church at 3500 North Solomons Island Road is an example of a late 19th-century rural vernacular church constructed in the Gothic Revival style. The traditionally African-American congregation was formed in 1883 by the Chase, Mackall and Wall families. (1) The church is said to be one of the most significant African-American Methodist churches in Calvert County. (2) Documentary photographs reveal that the church as originally constructed consisted of a typical one-room sanctuary with a front-gable roof, a gabled apse to the west, and the projecting steeple and entry vestibule. (3) It was clad in narrow lapped weatherboard and a pressed metal shingle roof typical of the period of construction. The building had 9/9 wood-sash windows in the sanctuary, 6/6 wood-sash windows on the sides of the vestibule, and an exterior-end, brick stove chimney on the south elevation. The one-story, one-room wood-frame hall plan adopted for the early church is typical for "public" buildings of the late 19th and early 20th centuries and was used for churches, parish/fellowship/grange halls, fraternal halls, and community halls during this period. The one-story addition on the south elevation was constructed circa 1995 and appears to have coincided with the replacement of the windows throughout the building. The cemetery includes the interments of several significant African-American members of the local community, including Reverend Levi Chase. There are also hand-carved gravestones from the 20th century. The church is now known as Patuxent United Methodist Church.

Patuxent M.E. Church stands 15' from Md. Rte. 4 (westside) near Huntingtown in Calvert County. The church faces east. The church measures 24' across the front facade and is 56' in depth. The entrance has 4 narrow steps that lead to double 3panel (oak) doors). A short tower rises above the entrance to an open belfry which contains a cradle bell. The belfry is surmounted by a short spire that is covered with composite shingles and capped with a spike. The church was weatherboard, but is now covered with aluminium siding. There are 2 6over6 (clear glass) rectangular windows (8') in the front facade. There are 4 of these identical windows on the north side of the church and 4 more on the south side. The cemetery is on the south side of the church.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Patuxent M.E. Church is a fine example of late Victorian vernacular architecture. It sits on a hill a few miles south of Huntingtown looking like an ornament for a Christmas garden. The church was built in 1883 and 1893. The cemetery contains the remains of the late Rev. Levi Chase (a native son). This is the church of the black members of the Chase, Mackall and Walls families. It is the most important black Methodist Church in Calvert County.
